Where to go

India abounds with spirit, wonder, and endless curiosities.

Many travelers you may meet there will likely tell you it is not their first time in the country. Its essence is suffused with some of the most incredible examples of human history, culture, experiences, cuisine, landscapes and startling contrasts.

India is a vast subcontinent with many distinct regions. Depending on the length of your trip, plan to visit one to two regions that interest you the most. Whether its culture, religious sites, wild landscapes, or wildlife encounters you'll find it here. India awaits from the Himalayas in the north to Kerala's tropical beaches in the south.

Delhi

A metropolis host to incredible monuments of its eight historical cities

Taj Mahal and Agra

Visit one of the world's most beautiful buildings

Rajasthan: Land of Kings

See the colored cities of Jaipur and Jodhpur

Thar Desert

Take an overnight camel safari from the fort city of Jaisalmer

When to go

Ideal months to travel in India are from October to March. This is when the weather is most hospitable, typically cooler, and dryer through most of the country. India experiences monsoon during the wet season which typically begins in May.

These months are suitable for most of the north and south. However consider that due to winter conditions high altitude Himalayan destinations like Ladakh may be inaccessible until summer months May through September.

Travel Tips

With so much to see it would take a lifetime to experience it all. Get a taste of one to two regions. You can make a hop across country by plane with most flights connecting through Delhi. Train journeys are also possible for an overland experience but longer journeys can become quite tiresome.

Delhi, Taj Mahal, and Jaipur's pink city are among the most popular destinations in the north. Other notable destinations are Pushkar, the Golden Temple of Amritsar, the city of Varanasi on the holy Ganges, Rishikesh, and Ladakh. Along the coast and to the south there is Mumbai, Goa, Kerala and so much more.

India is famous for its cuisine and veg options but when indulging take care to drink bottled water only, eat freshly cooked foods which can usually be identified by busy stalls and avoid items that could be left sitting out.

If wildlife is what you're after look into visiting one of the national parks or wildlife reserves. Tigers can be seen in Bandhavgarh. Rhinos in Kaziranga.

The cities can be quite overwhelming for first time travelers. Find space to slow down and relax. Be wary of hassles and scams. Be assertive. Always confirm the rate with your drivers and if they insist on taking you handicrafts shops don't be afraid to decline. Understand that they are working for sales commission.

PLAN YOUR TRIP TO INDIA NOW.
